A unique opportunity to transform your approach to change in communities

About the Harwood Institute

Real, lasting change occurs only when people and communities help lead the solution. We bring together people on the front lines of creating change in communities to challenge conventional assumptions, learn together, inspire one another and strengthen our collective ability to be a force for good.

What will you learn

1. What you stand for-

Know and say what you stand for, what sparks your engagement in the community and motivates you to build a more inclusive, hopeful society.

2. How change happens -

Explore how you can unleash a chain reaction of actions in your community and how change grows and spreads over time.

- 3. What matters to people - Discover why people's shared aspirations and concerns are so important, and how sharing the public knowledge can develop strategies and align actions
- 4. Know where your community is -Learn where your community is starting - and not simply where you wish it to be - which will enable you to identify the strategies, expectations and pace of change that best fit your local context.
- 5. How you show up Identify what it means and what it takes to show up differently because turning outward and catalysing change requires that we show up in new ways.
